

STUDENTS ASK: W

U.S. colleges and universities offer first-year experiences, like CSI's GNED 101, to help students begin to thrive in college. These types of classes provide students with an understanding of themselves as independent learners and provide a pathway of seeing how their 30 credits of general education will enhance their future degree programs and life goals .

The GNED 101 learning outcomes are designed to build student learning skills by incorporating student engagement activities and high-impact practices into the curriculum and delivery of the class.
